All statements other than statements of historical fact may be forward-looking statements. Statements relating to “reserve” or “resources” are deemed to be forward-looking statements, as they involve the implied assessment, based on certain estimates and assumptions that the reserves and resources described can be profitably produced in the future.

Forward-looking statements can generally be identified by the words “believe”, “anticipate”, “expect”, “plan”, “estimate”, “targeting”, “continue”, “foresee”, “could”, “might”, “intend”, “may”, “potential”, “predict”, “should”, “will”, “objective”, “project”, “forecast”, “goal”, “guidance”, “outlook”, “effort” “seek”, “schedule” or expressions of a similar nature suggesting future outcome or statements regarding an outlook, which speak only as of the date on which they are made. In particular, statements relating to future performance are forward-looking statements and forward-looking information.

Such forward-looking statements or forward-looking information are based on management’s current expectations at the time the statements were originally made or at the time the information was originally provided. Such forward-looking statements or forward-looking information may rely

These factors include and are not restricted to changes in the market, potential downturns in economic conditions, general economic and business conditions, foreign exchange fluctuations, changes in business strategy, regulatory requirements, supply and demand for commodities, market competition, possible commerciality, planned exploration activity, access to capital, and dependence on key personnel and other risks identified from time to time. The foregoing list of factors that may affect future growth, results and performance is not exhaustive and undue reliance should not be placed thereon. These statements involve known and unknown risks, uncertainties and other factors that may cause actual results or events to differ materially from those anticipated in such forward-looking statements.
